

Following the Commandments

Read the stories. Write an ending for one of them, having the characters working out the problem. Act out the story with friends.

Tim and Greg were twin brothers. They shared almost everything—books, toys, even friends! One rainy afternoon, Greg started up the computer in order to play his favorite game. Just then, Timothy came into the family room, heading for the computer. He wanted to log onto the Internet and read an e-mail message from the twins' grandfather. "I want to use the computer now," demanded Tim. "But I was here first!" Greg argued.

Erica and Lisa were friends. Their teacher, Miss Johnson, gave them an art project to work on together. Erica gathered construction paper, scissors, paste, and crayons. She began cutting, pasting, and coloring.

While Erica was working, Lisa watched her favorite TV show. Erica finished the project by herself.

The next day Miss Johnson gave both girls an A on the project. She praised them by saying, "You both worked so hard!"
